Like many elder daughters of Jamaican families, G was responsible for the family kitchen and cooking for her two siblings from age 11. After emigrating to London in the 60's she made the leap into setting up a West Indian takeaway in the heart of Peckham with her mother Virus. 'Freddie's' opened its doors in 1979 specialising in authentic Jamaican dishes. G, now normally takes more of a backseat in the kitchen-handing her recipes to her children and grandchildren. This August Bank Holiday weekend, she will be working closely with her soon to be grandson-in-law Harry to offer up her favourite dishes, whilst no doubt enjoying a few well-deserved rum punches along the way.
